This folder contains copies of some old family pictures and articles I have found while researching the Coats or Coates, early settlers in Terre Haute.

1. A picture of an old Coats home that stood at the corner of S 7th and Walnut Streets was among old pictures that belonged to an uncle. My cousin shared it with me. There is a story on the back of the picture, which tells that it sat where Wiley High School was later built. We found an article in the Terre Haute paper, which backs up the story except it, states that the house stood on the southeast corner and where Wiley was erected was pasture. From there the family must have moved to N 6th and Mulberry, as there are listings in the 1871 and 1872 city directories for them at this address. Also found a picture in the paper for this house when it was sold to Moore Langden Printing Company so they could erect a new building. This is also mentioned in Albert Coats obituary.

2. Pictures and inscriptions on the stones in the Coats Family plot at Woodlawn Cemetery on North 3rd Street.

3. A copy of a picture of Albert Linton Coats 1852-1913, my great grandfather, sitting at an easel. My Mother had this picture. She said he was a portrait painter but had to do sign painting also to make a living. He or his father William coats was supposed to have painted a picture of Frances Vigo, which had hung in the Vigo County courthouse. She also said that some of his paintings were said to be hanging in the Emeline Fairbanks library on N 7th street. When I was in highschool in the 1950's I looked for them there but didn't see any.

4. Pages in the old family bible have dates of marriages and deaths of some of the Coats. My grandma was Alice Belle Coats, daughter of Albert Coats and Martha Melton Coats. Her lineage goes back to Patience Brewster daughter of William Brewster who arrived in America on the Mayflower.

5. Wm coats is mentioned in an article by Dorothy Clark which states his business was at third and Main St and again in an article by Mike McCormick when he told about a huge fire in the building at that corner. We have a copy of an old receipt from this business. And he was mentioned in a history of Terre Haute where it tells he painted the first poor house built here.

I am submitting this information for a family file for the library in hope that someone else researching this family may find it and contact me.

Article from the Terre Haute newspaper dated May 16, 1903

Former Coats Home which will be torn down is familiar old landmark

After having weathered the storms of some forty years, the dwelling house on the southeast corner of Seventh & Walnut Streets is to be torn down. When it was erected the house was the second built in the block bounded by Seventh and Eight, Walnut and Poplar. The site now occupied by the Wiley High school building was used as a pasture lot and the southeast section of what is now Terre Haute was a wild pasture over strewn with trees and bushes.

One of the peculiar incidents connected with the old house was the small amount of money that changed hands during the erection, according to Mrs. Emma Coats who formerly owned the house

The land on which the house was built was owned by the late Chauncey Rose. Mr. Rose platted the ground and sold building lots at reasonable prices with the provisions that all purchasers erect homes on sites purchased.

Mrs. Coat's husband was a personal friend of Mr. Rose, and the latter suggested that he purchase a lot and erect a building. Mr. Coats did not think he could make the purchase due to lack of funds, but Mr. Rose would not listen to the "hard luck" stories. He induced Mr. Coats to take the property and pay for it in work. Mr. Coats was a painter and sign writer. According to the agreement entered into with Mr., Rose he was to take the property and work for Mr. Rose at times when he was unable to procure work from other men.

The plan worked out finely, but when it became necessary to erect a building, again Mr. Coats found himself short of funds. This did not hinder the erection of a building, however. A friend, who was a carpenter, desired some painting done. The friend erected the house and Mr. Coats did the painting in payments. The hardware was procured in much the same manner. The local hardware dealer desired some sign work and other painting and found Mr. Coats ready to do the work in exchange for hardware.

"No more notes were required in those days," said Mrs. Coats." It seems as though men had more trust in their neighbors in those days than they have now. They did more work then, too. The men went to work early and worked until late. There wasn't much money changed hands, either. People swapped for the necessities of life."

Following the erection of the house, it was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Coats until Mr. Coats died. Then it became the property of Mrs. Coats where it remained in her hands until a short time ago, when it was purchased by Mr. William Q. Haythorn, who owns the property adjoining the south. Mr. Haythorn has not decided whether he will erect a building on the site.

In 1872, the Terre Haute Daily Journal was published by Edmunds and Jordan. The office was on the corner of Third and Main streets. Edmunds became Terre Haute's mayor in 1876 and was re-elected for a second term. He continued in the newspaper business for 25 years.

Unlike some of the newspapers of that period, the Daily Journal preferred to group like advertisements and notices under bold, black-type headlines — one such heading was known as the "Professional Column."

Advertising in this column were "Drs. Water and Elder, Homoepathic Physicians and Surgeons, located on Cherry Street between Sixth and Seventh."

The office of Stephen J. Young, M.D., was at No. 12 on South Fifth Street, opposite St. Joseph's Catholic Church. He promised "prompt attention paid to all professional calls, day or night.

"Drs. Stevenson and Roberts, office 110 Opera House Block, upstairs. Residence at the Terre Haute House. Office hours 9 to noon, and from 2 to 4 p.m.

"R. Van Valzah, Surgeon and Mechanical Dentist, No. 106 Main St., Opera House Block upstairs, over Warren, Hoberg & Co.'s Store."

Under the heading of "Book Binding" was listed: "Jos. Kashberg has established his new place on Sixth opposite the Post Office . . . also binds magazines." In those days, people had their magazines bound by the year and would shelve them and refer back to articles.

Another bookbinder listed in the Journal was "C.A. Schnabel, over Burnett's leather store at No. 146 Main St."

William Coats, a house and sign painter, offered "graining, paperhanging, glazing, etc." His store was at the corner of Main and Third, upstairs in the Farrington Block.

A. Reif & Sons, gas and steam fitters, were located on Ohio between Fifth and Sixth streets.

Jacob Butz and his son, George C. Butz, advertised that the National House, corner of Sixth and Main, had been recently, thoroughly renovated and re-furnished.

At the Dye House of H.F. Reiner, on Main between Sixth and Seventh, "Gent's and Ladies' Wear" could be "cleaned and colored," and "Gent's Wear repaired neatly."

Everything in the Grocery and Produce line was for sale cheap in 1872 at the store of "George H. Purdy, No. 40-42 Main St., McGregor's Block." He paid "the highest cash price for butter, eggs, poultry, rags, beans, hides, old iron, sheep pelts, chicken, ducks, turkeys and other country produce."

Under "Local Notices" was the news that Samuel C. Scott had just purchased from F.C. Crawford the Boot & Shoe House, No. 98 Main St., formerly Murray's old stand."

Charles May had just opened a new meat shop at the corner of Eighth and Main streets.

The drug house of W.C. Buntin & Co. changed to Buntin & Armstrong when W. H. Armstrong purchased interest in the firm. Buntin had spent the previous winter in Philadelphia learning all the latest developments in the profession of pharmacy and while there he hired J.H. Bringhurst Jr., a "thorough and practical Pharmaceutist and Chemist."

A fine free lunch consisting of all the luxuries in season, served in the finest style, was set every forenoon from 9 to 11 o'clock at the well-known and popular Metropolitan Saloon on North Lafayette Street. Everybody was cordially invited to drop in and partake of the good things on the table.

The Brilliant Saloon on Second Street, between Main and Cherry, north of the Anderson House, was opened the evening of March 23, 1872, with a grand free reception. This establishment was fitted up in excellent style and the bar stocked with the choicest and purest of liquors.

Turtle soup at the Teutonia Hotel Saloon was offered for only 10 cents a bowl.

C. Kuhlman applied to the county commissioners for a license to sell spirituous and intoxicating liquors in less quantities than a quart at a time for one year. The premises where the booze was to be sold and imbibed was located at the northwest corner of Eighth and Poplar streets.

Other persons applying for liquor licenses in 1872 were Catherine Cane, southside Main between First and Second; Jeremiah Haley, northside of Main between 10th and 11th; James M. Davis, northwest corner Second and Main; John A. Bryan, northside of Ohio between Third and Fourth; William Norris, northeast corner Second and Main, in Middletown, Prairie Creek Township; and George W. Morland, at Fountain Station (Fontanet), Nevins Township.

The big rage for paper dresses and other items of clothing is really not so new. In 1872, Fred Schlewig, merchant tailor, located at 142 Main, between Sixth and Seventh (yes, that was before the Philadelphia numbering system was instituted by the U.S. Post Office) was selling both linen and paper collars. In fact, each buyer of a box of collars was given free a "fine paper necktie!"

Officers 1890: Leonard S. Briggs, president; James M. Sankey, vice-president; Uriah P. Jeffers, superintendent; George A. Scholl, treasurer; Charles A. Oakey, secretary. Directors: John G. Williams, J. M. Sankey, L. S. Briggs, G. C. Clem, Ed. Ellis, W. T. Beauchamp; these to serve one year. To serve two years: G. A. Scholl, U. R. Jeffers, H. D. Roquet, Frank McKeen, John M. Clift and W. R. Hunter.

Poor Asylum.—Feed the hungry and clothe the naked is a sacred charge. The unfortunates are always with us, in trembling old age and in the weak wail of the famishing babes, victims so often of men's unholy greed. There was a time when Vigo had not a pauper in it, but the growth of population brought the prize of this perpetual crop at quite an early day. The responsibility of the care of these was in the hands of the county authorities, where it naturally went when the demands became burdensome upon private charity.

The first poor-house was built in 1853. It was 28x30 feet in dimensions, had six rooms and a hall through the center. The building was contracted for $725. William Coates did the painting—$70 for the outside and $25 for inside work.

The first poor-farm was sold in June, 1856; contained eighty acres, the north half of the northeast quarter of Section 26, Town 12, Range 9. The city had grown to it, and the accommodations were wholly inadequate. It was ordered laid off in five-acre lots as an addition to the city, and to be sold at public sale by the county auditor.

In the early part of 1866 the county purchased its present poor-farm of 135 acres of Dr. George W. Clippinger on the south side of the southwest quarter of Section 12, Town 12, Range 9 west. The contract for this property was made by County Commissioner Benjamin McKeen and confirmed by the board July, 1866; consideration, $10,000. In March, 1867, T. B. Snapp was employed to furnish plans and specifications for the new county asylum, and notices to builders were published in the Express and Journal, the whole to be completed in 1867. J. L. Brown, superintendent, and E. D. Carter, master mechanic. The farm lands were rented to John W. Jackson and John M. Coltrin. The work progressed rapidly, and in September John L. Brown was authorized to contract for engine boilers to furnish hot water for the building. The cost of the buildings as audited in May of that year was $5,450.

These are the buildings and grounds of the present county poor asylum, where the unfortunates with the other charities of the churches and the city of Terre Haute are sufficient for all worthy needs.

Downtown fire 150 years ago most destructive in Terre Haute history

In the early nineteenth century, rarely a month went by in Terre Haute without a destructive fire.

Indeed, if there was not a fire, it was newsworthy.

On Feb. 11, 1854, Jesse Conard, editor-publisher of the weekly Wabash Courier, began his local column with the following remark:

"FIRE – A considerable time has now elapsed since the cry of Fire has been heard, to arouse us from our dreams at night or by day. Should not every one remember that there is danger of being lulled into too much neglect and security? A fire may come very suddenly and find no preparation."

Conard turned out to be prophetic. In the ensuing 60 days, several major fires hit downtown Terre Haute. From the standpoint of the number of buildings destroyed, one of them was the most destructive in history.

On Wednesday, Feb. 22, the engine room at Richard L. Thompson's Anchor Mill at First and Poplar streets – the largest flour mill in the city – was destroyed.

A favorable wind prevented the main building at the mill from sustaining major damage, though flour barrels stored there were broken into pieces.

Then, on Feb. 28, John Askins' carpenter shop at Third and Walnut streets was ravaged by a fire that destroyed two adjoining tenement houses.

The next evening, the Congregational Church at Sixth and Cherry – which already had lost its steeple during a tornado in April 1853 – was found ablaze, destroying all of the woodwork.

Early on Friday, March 3, the frame building at Fourth and Cherry streets occupied by Scott, Sander and Allen, carriage makers, was reduced to rubble and several horses were killed.

HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE

MIKE McCORMICK

The worst was yet to come. At 2 a.m., Wednesday, April 12, flames were discovered pouring from Harry Snyder's leather store on the southeast corner of Fourth and Wabash.

The fire expanded rapidly to the east and south, gradually consuming every structure in a half block area except one residence and James Random's wagon shop on Ohio Street.

It also spread across Fourth Street, destroying a large frame building and threatening the new post office immediately south of Wabash on the west side of the street.

Twenty-one buildings – most of them of frame construction – were destroyed and more than 100 people were put out of work.

Besides Snyder, businesses affected on Wabash were Jabez Hedden's boot and shoe business next door; A.C. Furrow's provisions store; Furrow & Brooks grocery; Lucien Houriet's jewelry and watchmaking shop; bootmakers Andrew and William Joyce; sign painter William Coats, an unidentified clothing store and another family grocery.

On the east side of Fourth Street, buildings occupied by Dr. Samuel Fahnestock's medical office, Warren Chadwick's livery stables, William and Septer Patrick's paint shop, barber James Mitchell, Martin Grace's marble store, Henry Fairbanks Rifle Manufacturing Co., John Dodson's grocery, Will Neumeister's confectionary, John Dimmick's cabinet shop and Larew Brothers' carriage manufacturing form were wiped out.

The loss of personal property was surprisingly small, as some business owners were able to remove goods from their shop as the fire progressed from one building to another.

"The loss, however, in buildings destroyed, and of business interrupted, must be very large," editor Conard wrote in the Courier three days later.

"The whole block was a working place, and occupied by useful business people. The new Post Office building made a narrow escape, being much injured with burned ash and broken windows.

"This is altogether the greatest fire which this place has ever experienced. In the number of buildings destroyed, perhaps at least double that of any other.

"From all appearances there seems but little doubt that this extensive conflagration originated with the incendiary – and it is hoped the matter may be properly investigated and the guilty brought to punishment."

By the end of the summer, nine new three-story brick structures on Wabash east of Fourth St. were ready for occupancy.

The day following the great downtown fire of 1854 – 150 years ago – the remains of 44-year old Edmond Glazier were interred in Terre Haute's Woodlawn Cemetery.

Editor Conard was deeply affected by Glazier's death. He wrote:

"Without a relative to shed a tear, he was followed to the grave by a number of friends and acquaintances.

"In his own peculiar sphere, few persons will be more missed from our town than E. Glazier. For a long series of years he was the presiding genius of music.

"With all the agreeable remembrances of barbecues, picnics, festivals, balls, parties, cotillions, processions, etc., come the pleasant associations of Glazier and his music. Who does not remember his face and bass-viol in the gallery choir of Mr. Jewett's [Congregational] Church?

"Who will now preside …? No one! Now that he is gone, he will be missed. An excellent musician himself and a good judge of it in others …

"He was his own worst enemy. Yielding to temptation beneath himself, he was conquered at last and no longer will be found mingling in the passing scenes around us."

Article from the Terre Haute newspaper dated May 16, 1903

Former Coats Home which will be torn down is familiar old landmark

After having weathered the storms of some forty years, the dwelling house on the southeast corner of Seventh & Walnut Streets is to be torn down. When it was erected the house was the second built in the block bounded by Seventh and Eight, Walnut and Poplar. The site now occupied by the Wiley High school building was used as a pasture lot and the southeast section of what is now Terre Haute was a wild pasture over strewn with trees and bushes.

One of the peculiar incidents connected with the old house was the small amount of money that changed hands during the erection, according to Mrs. Emma Coats who formerly owned the house

The land on which the house was built was owned by the late Chauncey Rose. Mr. Rose platted the ground and sold building lots at reasonable prices with the provisions that all purchasers erect homes on sites purchased.

Mrs. Coat's husband was a personal friend of Mr. Rose, and the latter suggested that he purchase a lot and erect a building. Mr. Coats did not think he could make the purchase due to lack of funds, but Mr. Rose would not listen to the "hard luck" stories. He induced Mr. Coats to take the property and pay for it in work. Mr. Coats was a painter and sign writer. According to the agreement entered into with Mr., Rose he was to take the property and work for Mr. Rose at times when he was unable to procure work from other men.

The plan worked out finely, but when it became necessary to erect a building, again Mr. Coats found himself short of funds. This did not hinder the erection of a building, however. A friend, who was a carpenter, desired some painting done. The friend erected the house and Mr. Coats did the painting in payments. The hardware was procured in much the same manner. The local hardware dealer desired some sign work and other painting and found Mr. Coats ready to do the work in exchange for hardware.

"No more notes were required in those days," said Mrs. Coats." It seems as though men had more trust in their neighbors in those days than they have now. They did more work then, too. The men went to work early and worked until late. There wasn't much money changed hands, ·either. People swapped for the necessities of life."

Following the erection of the house, it was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Coats until Mr. Coats died. Then it became the property of Mrs. Coats where it remained in her hands until a short time ago, when it was purchased by Mr. William Q. Haythorn, who owns the property adjoining the south. Mr. Haythorn has not decided whether he will erect a building on the site.

It was told that Coats had painted a portrait of Frances Vigo. It could have been his father William Coats who was also a portrait painter and would have been a contemporary of Vigo. The following article appeared in a Terre Haute newspaper in June, 1908.

PICTURE OF COL VIGO IS GIVEN TO COUNTY
A portrait of Col. Frances Vigo, who was a prominent figure in the history of the middle west during the revolutionary times, was presented to the County yesterday by William J Cruft of South Sixth Street. The old picture was hung in the commissioners court room and the board of commissioners ordered a letter of acceptance and of thanks drafted.

The picture is an old one, the canvas being almost black near the bottom and several breaks are noticeable. The commissioners have decided to have the portrait recoiled and rebacked. It will then be hung in its old gilt frame in the court room.

The gift has been in the Cruft family for many years and it is a most interesting one. General Cruft a brother of thedonor, had the picture painted but the artist did not sign his work.

A short history accompanied the portrait. Col. Vigo according to the history, was born in Spain and died in Vincennes, Indiana in 1836 at the age of 95 years. He was during his lifetime a wealthy trader. When George Rogers Clark led the expedition which eventually resulted in the final possession of Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan, Col. Vigo assisted him with his money and his personal services. He impoverished himself in his desire to help Clark and he died a comparatively poor man.

At his death he left a sum of money to buy a bell for the Vigo County court house and the one that now hangs in the present structure was his gift to the county that bears his name. In 1832 Col. Vigo made his last trip to Terre Haute, being then 94 years old. He lived to a ripe old age and his good deeds and liberality still live in the hearts of the citizens of Vigo.

Resolution of Respect To Alice Belle Johnson who passed to rest on Saturday Jan 24, 1931

Where as it has pleased our all wise Father to take from our midst, Sister Alice Belle Johnson whom we loved and esteemed both as a friend and a fraternal sister.
Therefore, Be it resolved; that West Terre Haute Chapter has lost a member who appreciated to the fullest extent the beautiful teachings of our order and her family a loving and loyal wife and mother.
Be it further resolved: that West Terre Haute Chapter does most tendrly sympathize with her husband, sons, daughters, and all who were bound to her by sics of kindred.
Be it again further resolved; That as a solace for the lonely and bereaved there is real comfort in the words of our Savior who said to Martha "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me though he be dead, yet shall he live and he that liveth and believeth in me shall never die."
Be it again resolved; That the charter of this chapter bear the sign of mourning during a period of thirty days, That these resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed sister become a part of the permanent record of our chapter and that a copy be sent to the family of our dear departed as a token of our sympathy and of the high regard in which we held her.

3. ELDER WILLIAM[3] BREWSTER (WILLIAM[2], WILLIAM[1]) was born Abt. 1566 in Scooby, Nottinghamshire, England, and died April 10, 1644 in Plymouth Colony, New England. He married MARY Abt. 1590 in Scooby, Nottinghamshire, England. She was born Abt. 1569 in Loversall, Yorkshire, England, and died April 17, 1627 in Plymouth Colony, New England.

Notes for ELDER WILLIAM BREWSTER:
William Brewster was born about 1566, the son of William Brewster. He was educated in both Greek and Latin and spent some time at Cambridge University, although he never completed a full degree. He went into the service of William Davison, then Secretary of State, while his father back home maintained a position as the postmaster of Scrooby, Nottinghamshire. Under Davison, Brewster first traveled to the Netherlands. After Davison's departure as Secretary of State, Brewster worked himself into his father's postmaster duties and maintained Scrooby Manor. Brewster was instrumental in establishing the small Separatist church with Richard Clyfton, and they often held their meetings in the Manor house. Brewster and the others were eventually found and forced out, and fleeing prosecution and persecution they headed to Amsterdam in 1608, and moving to Leiden, Holland in 1609. Brewster became the church's Elder, responsible for seeing that the congregation's members carried themselves properly, both helping and admonishing them when necessary.

In Leiden, Brewster working with Thomas Brewer became working a printing press and publishing religious books and pamphlets which were then illegally conveyed into England. Brewster also employed himself teaching University of Leiden students English. By 1618, the English authorities were onto him and his printing press, and had the Dutch authorities in pursuit of him. Thomas Brewer was arrested and held in the University of Leiden's prison, but Brewster managed to evade the authorities and went into hiding for a couple years.

When the Leiden church congregation decided to send the first wave to set up and establish a colony that everyone could eventually move to, their pastor John Robinson decided to remain behind in Leiden with the majority of the congregation, intending to come later. The smaller group that went on the Mayflower desired the next highest ranking church official, Elder Brewster, go with them; so he agreed. He brought his wife Mary and two youngest children, Love and Wrestling, on the Mayflower with him.
Brewster continued his work as Church Elder throughout his life at Plymouth Colony. His wife Mary died in 1627, and he never remarried. He lived to be nearly 80 years old, dying in 1644. Shortly after he died, William Bradford wrote a short but concise biography of Brewster, just a couple pages, in his history Of Plymouth Plantation.

William Brewster was the Reverend Elder of the Pilgrim's church at Plymouth, since their pastor John Robinson remained behind in Leyden, Holland with the majority of the congregation which planned to come to America at a later time. Brewster was a fugitive from the King of England, because he had published a number of religious pamphlets while in Leyden which were critical or opposed the tenets of the Church of England. He had been a member of the Separatist church movement from its very beginning, and was the oldest Mayflower passenger to have participated at the First Thanksgiving, in his early fifties.

William Bradford wrote a lot about William Brewster in Of Plymouth Plantation, some of which follows:
After he had attained some learning, viz. the knowledge of Latin tongue, and some insight in the Greek, and spent some small time at Cambridge, and then being first seasoned with the seeds of grace and virtue, he went to the court, and served that religious and godly gentleman, Mr. Davison, divers years, when he was Secretary of State; who found him so discreet and faithful as he trusted him above all other that were about him, and only employed him in all matters of greatest trust and secrecy ... he attended his mr. when he was sent in ambassage by the Queen into the Low Countries . . . And, at his return, the States honored him with a gold chain, and his master committed it to him, and commanded him to wear it when they arrived in England, as they rid through the country, till they came to the court . . . Afterwards he went and lived in the country, in good esteem amongst his friends and the gentlemen of those parts, especially the Godly and religious. He did much good in the country where he lived, in promoting and furthering religion not only by his practise and example, and provocating and encouraging of others, but by procuring of good preachers to the places thereabouts, and drawing on of others to assist and help forward in such work; he himself most commonly deepest in the charge, and sometimes above his ability. . . . They ordinarily met at this house on the Lord's day, (which was a manor of the bishops) and with great love he entertained them when they came, making provision for them to his great charge. He was the chief of those that were taken at Boston, and suffered the greatest loss; and of the seven that were kept longest in prison, and after bound over . . . After he came into Holland he suffered much hardship, after he had spent the most of his means, having a great charge, and many children; and, in regard of his former breeding and course of life, not so fit for many employments as others were, especially as were toilsome and laborious. But yet he ever bore his condition with much cheerfulness and contention. Towards the later part of those 12 years spent in Holland, his outward condition was mended, and he lived well and plentifully; for he fell into a way to teach many students, who had a desire to learn the English tongue, to teach them English; . . . He also had means to set up printing, by the help of some friends . . . and by reason of many books which would not be allowed to be printed in England, they might have had more then they could do. . . . And besides that, he would labor with his hands in the fields as long as he was able; yet when the church had no other minister, he taught twice every Sabbath . . . For his personal abilities, he was qualified above many; he was wise and discreet and well spoken, having a grave and deliberate utterance, of a very cheerful spirit, very sociable and pleasant amongst his friends, of an humble and modest mind, of a peaceable disposition, undervaluing himself and his own abilities . . . inoffensive and innocent in his life and conversation . . . he was tender-hearted, and compassionate of such as were in misery, but especially of such as had been of good estate and rank, and were fallen into want and poverty, either for goodness and religions sake, or by the injury and oppression of others; . . .

ANCESTRAL SUMMARY:
(1) William Brewster, taxed 1524, Bently cum Arksey, York, England; m. Maude Man bef. 1558; children: William and Henry.
(2) William Brewster II, b. c1535, d. 1590, living in Scrooby, York, England in 1564; m. Mary (Smythe) Simkinson, dau. of William Smythe of Stainforth, Hatfield, England, widow of John Simkinson of Doncaster, York, England.
(3) William Brewster of the Mayflower
On 12 June 1609, a Leyden record shows that William Brewster and Ann Peck gave power of attorney to Thomas Simkinson, merchant of Hull. Presumably Thomas Simkinson has some relation to Brewster's mother's first husband John Simkinson

Notes for MARY:
Mary came to Plymouth on the Mayflower with husband William, and her two youngest sons Love and Wrestling.
